

SENATOR HABERMAN: And what does that amount to? What does that address?

SENATOR L. JOHNSON: I would ask you to address that to Senator Warner.

SENATOR HABERMAN: Well, I can tell you what it addresses, Senator Johnson, it addresses a tax issue. So what I'm trying to bring to your attention, folks, is we better start looking, maybe, underneath the surface of some of these amendments and some of these bills because they change their spots, and the reason they change their spots is because maybe there isn't any other way to do it. If each individual issue had to stand on its own feet, maybe they wouldn't happen. So, the revenue...the tax issue, to me, should have come to the Revenue Committee, not to the Appropriations Committee, but it didn't. So when you change titles, when you change a bill three times, just because it was taken care of in some of their issues, then drop the issue, if it's taken care of, we don't need the bill, instead of somebody using it for their own little pet projects. That's not saying I'm against Cushing Coliseum, Senator Langford. I'm just saying I don't like the way it was handled. Thank you, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT: Thank you. Senator Bernard-Stevens is next, but may I introduce some guests, please in the north balcony. They are guests of Senator Hefner. There are 38 home economics ladies from Cedar County. Would you folks please stand and be recognized. Thank you for visiting us today, ladies. Senator Bernard-Stevens. Who do you have there?

SENATOR BERNARD-STEVENS: Point of personal privilege, Mr. Speaker. I want to introduce...I got a chance to introduce my wife a couple of weeks ago, and now my young son is here, three and a half year old David, and I wanted to introduce my only...our only child, David Andrew Bernard-Stevens. Doesn't fit on a computer sheet, but it gets on there. So this is my son, David Andrew Bernard-Stevens. Thank you.

PRESIDENT: Thank you. Would it be fair to say you're somewhat proud of that son?

SENATOR BERNARD-STEVENS: That's fair.
